☞ All who favour the Printer of this Gazette with ADVERTISEMENTS, are deſired to ſignify at Foot how long they would have them continued; otherwiſe they will be inſerted, as uſual, only in three ſucceſſive Papers.

The following Manifeſto of the Empreſs of Ruſſia, relative to the late aſſaſſination of Prince Ivan, having made a great noiſe all over Europe, the publication of it in our Paper, may perhaps not be unacceptable to our Readers.

Manifeſto of the Empreſs of Ruſſia.

CATHARINA II. by the grace of God, Empreſs and Sovereign of all the Ruſſias, &c. &c. maketh known by theſe preſents to all to whom it appertains: "When, by the will of God, and agreeable to the unanimous wiſhes of all our faithful ſubjects, we mounted the Throne of Ruſſia, we were not ignorant that Prince John, born of the marriage of Prince Anthony Bruſwick Wolfenbuttle, with the Princeſs Anne of Mecklenbourg, was ſtill alive. That Prince, as all the world knows, was no ſooner born than he was illegally appointed to wear the Imperial Crown of Ruſſia: But by the decrees of Providence, he was in a ſhort time after excluded for ever, and the ſceptre reverted to the lawful heir, daughter of Peter the Great, our moſt dear aunt of glorious memory.

"Our firſt cares, on our acceſſion to the Throne, after having rendered our thankſgiving to Heaven, were, through an effect of the humanity, which is natural to us, to make as eaſy as poſſible the fate of that Prince, deſtroned by the divine will, and unhappy from his infancy. We propoſed immediately to ſee him ourſelves, to judge of the faculties of his mind, and to procure him, ſuitable to his character and the education which he had hitherto received, a tranquil and comfortable life. But what was our ſurpriſe to find, that beſides a ſtammering incommodious to himſelf, and nearly incomprehenſible to others, he was abſolutely deprived of ſenſe and reaſon. All thoſe who were then with us, ſaw how much our heart ſuffered at the ſight of an object ſo proper to excite our compaſſion; and they were at the ſame time convinced, there remained nothing for us to do for that Prince, born ſo unhappily, but to leave him where he was, and to procure him all the indulgences ſuitable to his ſituation. We gave our orders in conſequence, tho' his condition did not permit him to be ſenſible of it, not knowing any body, nor being able to diſtinguiſh good from evil, nor to make uſe of books to paſs away the time; placing, on the contrary, all his felicity in things which ſhewed the diſorder of his imagination.

"To prevent, therefore, any attempts of evil-minded perſons, from particular views, to interrupt, in any manner whatever, or to make uſe of his perſon to trouble the public repoſe; we ordered him a ſure guard, and placed over him two honeſt and faithful officers of the garriſon. Theſe were Capt. Walſhoff and Lieut. Tchekin, who, by their long ſervices in the military, where their health had greatly ſuffered, merited recompence, and an eaſy employ for the remainder of their days. It was recommended to thoſe two officers to take all imaginable care of his perſon.

"However, notwithſtanding all theſe precautions, it was impoſſible to prevent a villain, thro' a moſt unnatural, wicked propenſity, and in contempt even of his own life, from committing at Schluſſenbourg a deed, the thought of which alone ſtrikes a terror. A Sub-Lieutenant of the regiment of Smolenſko infantry, an Ukranian by birth, named Baſile Mirowitz, grand-ſon of the firſt Rebel who followed Mazeppa, and to whom perjury was tranſmitted by blood, as appears, having paſſed his life in debauchery, diſſipation, and diſorder, and being thereby deprived of the means of making an honourable fortune; having at length loſt ſight of what he owed to the law of God, and the oath of fidelity he had taken to us, not knowing Prince John but by name, and ſtill much leſs the qualities of his body and mind, took it into his head, to attempt to make, by his means, a ſhining fortune at whatever price, and however bloody the ſcene might prove to the public.

"For the execution of this project, ſo deteſtable and dangerous for the country, and deſperate for himſelf, he demanded, during our journey into Livonia, that he might be ſent, tho' it was not his turn, to form the guard, which is relieved every eight days, in the fortreſs Schluſſenbourg; and in the night between the 4th and 5th of laſt month, at two hours after mid-night, he ſuddenly awoke his grand guard, ranged them, in front, and ordered them to charge with ball. Beredinicoff, commandant of the fortreſs, having heard a noiſe, ſallied out of his quarter, and demanded the reaſon of Mirowitz himſelf; but all the anſwer he got from that Rebel was a blow from the butt-end of his muſket on his head, which wounded and ſtunned him. After this he furiouſly led his troop to attack and fire on the few ſoldiers who guarded Prince John; but the latter who were formed under the orders of the two officers before-named, received him in ſuch a manner that he was obliged to retire. By a particular direction of Providence, who watches over the lives of men, there was that night a very thick fog, which joined to the interior ſituation of the fortreſs, occaſioned no perſon to be killed or wounded.

"The ill ſucceſs of this firſt attempt could not make this enemy of the public repoſe deſiſt from his project or rebellion; deſpair ſuggeſted to him the bringing from a baſtion a piece of cannon with the neceſſary ammunition, which he ſoon accompliſhed. Capt. Walſhoff and his Lieut. Tchekin, ſeeing a force which they could not reſiſt, and a misfortune much greater, inevitable, if the charge to them confided was delivered up, by the innocent blood which it would coſt the country in ſuch troubles; they both reſolved on the only ſtep which they thought remained, that is to ſay, to ſecure the public tranquility by abridging the days of the unfortunate Prince. Conſidering, beſides this, that if they let a priſoner eſcape in ſuch a manner, they ſhould riſk being puniſhed according to all the rigour of the laws, they took away the life of the Prince, without being deterred by the fear of receiving death from the hand of a villain drove to deſperation. This monſter, ſeeing before him the body of a lifeleſs Prince, was ſo ſtruck with the unexpected blow, that he immediately acknowledged his raſhneſs and his crime, and diſcovered his repentance to his troop, which but an hour before he had ſeduced, and made accomplices of his villainy.

"It was then that the officers, who had ſtifled this revolt in its birth, conjointly with the commandant, ſecured the rebel, brought back the ſoldiers to their duty, and ſent to the Privy Counſellor and Senator Panin (under whoſe orders they are) the report of this event, which, though unhappy, may, by the protection of Heaven have prevented a much greater misfortune.

"The Senator immediately ſent Lieut. Caſchkin with ſufficient inſtructions to ſecure tranquility and good order on the ſpot, and at the ſame time diſpatched a courier to us with the detail of this affair, in conſequence of which, we ordered our Lieutenant-General Weymarn, of the diviſion of St. Peterſbourgh to repair to the place, and to get the neceſſary informations, which being finiſhed, he has juſt remitted to us the interrogatories, the depoſitions of the witneſſes, the convictions and the villain's own confeſſion.

"Having acknowledged the greatneſs of this crime, and how much it concerns the repoſe of the whole country, we have laid the whole affair before our Senate, and ordered them, in conjunction with the Synod, to invite the three firſt claſſes and the Preſidents of all the Colleges, to hear the report from the mouth of Lieutenant-General Weymarn, who has gone through the informations; afterwards to pronounce ſentence according to the laws of the Empire; and, when it is ſigned, to preſent it to us for our confirmation."

Aug. 17, 1764. (L. S.) CATHARINE.

CHARLES-TOWN, December 31. 1764.

THURSDAY laſt, being the Feſtival of St. "JOHN EVANGELIST, the Society of FREE-"T "MASONS, aſſembled in the morning, and "went in proceſſion to St. Philip's Church, "where an excellent diſcourſe ſuitable to the "occaſion was delivered by the Reverend Mr. "Charles Martyn, Rector of St. Andrew's; the members preſent, being in number about 120, among whom were the "right worſhipful Benjamin Smith, Eſq; Provincial Grand-Maſter, the honourable William Bull, Eſq; Lieutenant Governor "of this province, the right honourable Lord William Gordon, and many other gentlemen of diſtinction. Dined and paſſed the "evening together, with that general ſatisfaction ſo conſpicuous in the aſſemblies of the ancient Fraternity."

Yeſterday JAMES POSTELL, Eſq of Ashepoo, was married to Miſs CATHARINE DOUSAINT, of this town.

☞ In C. G's Letter printed in our laſt, the Reader is deſired to make the following corrections, viz.

Same Column, Line 53 from the bottom, BETWEEN "for that word ASSEMBLY," AND "ALWAYS means the Houſe and NEVER the Members ſeparately," inſert this omiſſion, "or THE Aſſembly, either expreſſion taken abſolutely as there,"

Col. 2. Line 3. For "the only," read, "this only."
